SÃO PAULO SHOWS UP AND SHOWS OUT: THE VISION DOME LIGHTS UP BRAZIL WITH A NIGHT OF GOSPEL, LOVE, CHECKMATE, AND RAIN

Monique Sol opens, Indhyrah owns her home country, Nova Reign takes the throne, and Slim closes it out under the rain

---

The Slim Experience World Tour 2026 brought the Vision Dome to São Paulo, and the city answered in full voice. From the opening note to the final song, the night was a showcase of range, theater, and heart.

The show opened with the newest signee to R&R Entertainment and the Mecy Music Group family, Monique Sol (@officialmoniquesol). Backed by a full choir, she performed "Nothing Can Separate," the title song from her latest project, Faith Unbroken, filling the dome with powerful, soulful gospel and R&B vocals. Princess Live followed in white boots and a flowing white ensemble with "If You Only Knew," a slow country and R&B ballad written as an ode to the love of her life, who recently proposed in Paris.

Creative director Indhyrah then took the stage in her home country for two performances. "Gold Rush" featured Dove on violin, and "No Brakes" roared in with motorcycles carrying Indhyrah and Dove onstage, both dressed in the colors and pageantry of Brazil.

Then the dome went dark. Two images played across the screens, setting up a story of betrayal and a breakup about to be delivered, but Nova Reign was a step ahead. The stage lit up as a chessboard, and there she sat on a queen's throne in a gold headpiece and flowing royal robe while the crowd erupted into chants of "NOVA, NOVA, NOVA." Life-sized chess pieces moved with every lyric as she performed, and as everyone knows, the goal of chess is to capture the queen. Not tonight.

Headliner Slim closed the night the way only he can. In a crushed velvet two-piece, he stood in the rain onstage for his charting record "Never Again," recalling the moment that defined the tour's opening night in London back in July.

São Paulo is in the books, and the tour rolls on. Next stop: Berlin, on November 29. More details coming soon.
